

Bio: Steve Wiser 12-27-2009

Steve Wiser is a lifelong Louisvillian. He graduated from St. Xavier High School, and attended the University of Cincinnati for his architectural training. He is a registered architect and specializes in healthcare design.

Steve has served as president of the Louisville Historical League three times, where he still is on the Board of Directors. He also has been president of the local chapter of the American Institute of Architects and has received the Oberwarth Award, which is the highest honor of the Kentucky architect's association.

Steve has written numerous articles for Business First, the Courier-Journal newspaper, and other local publications, as well as several books. His most recent books are "Louisville 2035" and "Louisville Tapestry: People and Places that helped create America's Most Livable City". He also is the tour guide at Cave Hill Cemetery.

Steve Wiser is married with two children.