Where we've been; where we are; and, where we're headed: Find out in this fascinating look into metro Louisville's past, present, and future. What will be the hot new residential and business districts? How will transportation connections improve? Prepare now for the next exciting, dynamic 25 years in Louisville!

Author Steve Wiser is a noted local historian and nationally-recognized architect. He has written four books, dozens of articles, and talked before thousands on design and history related topics. This book is a result from two of Steve Wiser's popular presentations: "Unbuilt Louisville" and "Lost Landmarks of Louisville".

"Unbuilt Louisville" features developments that were proposed but never constructed. "Lost Landmarks" contains buildings that were built but no longer exist due to demolition. Steve merges both of these themes into a vision of how Louisville might change by 2035, or 25 years from the year 2010.

Steve combines local history, past proposals, current planning, and his own conjecture to offer an exciting future of how Louisville can become an even better place in which to live and work.

"Louisville 2035" provides a possible roadmap for the metro region's continued growth and success.
